showed dense aggregates of histiocytes, many of which contained phagocytosed degenerate renal tubular cells. The glomeruli appeared to be normal. Diltiazem, a calcium channel antagonist, has been reported to cause tubular cell damage, including apoptosis. Isolated granulomatous interstitial nephritis in patients with a history of hypersensitivity to diltiazem is reported for the first time. This invention relates to an automatic tool changer which can be

Reader DC is the industry-standard PDF reader available for Windows, Mac and mobile devices, and it's as useful today as it was 10 years ago. It opens and displays most PDFs you can encounter, including the popular Portable Document Format, or PDF, files. Not only does it open PDFs, but it lets you work with them efficiently, whether you're presenting, writing or creating in PDF. Acrobat Reader DC uses one of the most powerful PDF viewing engines available, in part due to its license from Adobe. Adobe Acrobat Reader DC has all of the tools and functionality you need to handle PDFs as files. With Acrobat Reader DC, you can:

- View PDFs as you would any other file
- Annotate PDFs with comments, stamps and other markups

AppLock is a non-intrusive piece of software that allows you to lock your screen, run only apps you trust, and monitor what's happening on your computer when you're away from your desk. By "locking your screen," we mean preventing users from accidentally changing settings or launching apps while you're logged in from different places. We're not talking about parental control solutions that lock your screen after a set period of time. AppLock protects your computer and lets you keep an eye on what your kids are doing on their smartphones or tablets. In addition to locking the screen, the program gives you options to prevent any app from running, list all the apps running, and even stop the program from running in the background. You can run apps that have a special permission to start up with the computer, and you can prevent those apps from launching automatically. Also, you can specify which apps can access your Wi-Fi and Bluetooth, how much time they have to do it, and how much they can use the Internet and the app's Internet access. A file-lock feature lets you create a virtual barrier for programs to protect their data, and an auto-shutdown feature locks your computer, waits for all the programs to close, and then shuts itself down. You can also decide what happens when your computer wakes up from sleep mode, which lets you configure it to start up in any state. The default profile is pretty good, but you can create custom profiles for apps to share. You can share an existing profile with other computers or make new profiles from scratch. The utility includes several other features, including one-time passwords, a notifications menu, logging, and more. The free version is limited to five locks, and the program includes a built-in feature that lets you search for apps and uninstall them. The paid version, on the other hand, includes unlimited locks, so you can limit access to each program. Despite its small size, AppLock offers a wealth of options that allow you to protect your PC without being intrusive. It's a simple and effective utility that's very easy to use
