Mangaluru: The new bridge connecting Gandhinagar to Mangaluru will be called as 'Believe'. The bridge is named after the team which had worked on the Mangaluru-Hassan bridge and completed it in November 2017. The bridge has been built at a cost of around Rs 850 crore. The 52-metre-wide. Emotion recognition in adults with serious mental illness: results from an internet-based study. People with serious mental illness (SMI) are known to have poor emotion recognition abilities that are associated with increased negative affect and less social support. No research has, however, examined the accuracy of emotion recognition by adults with SMI across different methodological conditions. In the current study, 60 adults with SMI were shown series of videos depicting basic emotions and asked to match an emotion expressed by an unseen person. Participants were tested under 3 different experimental conditions. Results showed that, contrary to traditional findings, people with SMI accurately recognized emotions shown in short videos, and did not differ from those with an anxiety or depressive disorder without SMI. Male participants with SMI also showed greater accuracy than females. The findings are discussed in terms of their implications for designing interventions to enhance emotion recognition in people with SMI.

Q: Removing a user from a role via PowerShell Script I'm creating a Powershell script to remove all users from a role. I'm using this as a nice small script to help clean up old users. However I'm having a few issues. Code

$UsersList = @() $Admin = $host | Get-ADGroup "Administrators" $AdminRoleList = $Admin | Get-ADGroupMember -Recursive $AdminRoleList | ForEach-Object{ $UsersList += $AdminRoleList} If I run this now, I get the following message. "The specified ADSI path cannot be found: 'CN=Administrators,CN=Users,DC=stmtsierra,DC=local' At C:\Inetpub\wwwroot\stmtsierra\scripts\Removeusers.ps1:22 char:25 + $AdminRoleList = $Admin | Get-ADGroupMember -Recursive + ~~~~~ + CategoryInfo
